

Short note on The French Revolution

Writer: Charles Dickens | Generated: Jan 26, 2026

Short note on The French Revolution

The French Revolution was a significant event in France in the late 18th century in 1789. It lasts about 10 years. During this time, France had many changes which impacted the world in different ways.

In the novel "A Tale of Two Cities" (1859) by Charles Dickens (1812-1870), the French Revolution symbolizes the destructive force of oppression. Besides, it refers to the yearning for freedom. The period is characterized by extreme poverty, hunger, and an oppressive monarchy. It shows that the aristocratic people maintained a luxurious lifestyle, but the ordinary people suffered from different types of problems. This sharp contrast between the rich and the poor is portrayed through characters like Charles Darnay, a French aristocrat, and Sydney Carton, an English lawyer.

The novel illustrates the anger and frustration of the French citizens. They raised their voice against oppressors. They desired to establish liberty, equality, and fraternity in France. The famous line, "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times," reflects the duality of this era. It described the people's yearning desire for justice and equality. It also described violence and chaos.

One of the most well-known aspects of the French Revolution was the attack on the Bastille, a prison in Paris. It occurred on July 14, 1789. It was a symbol of the people's anger and their desire for freedom. During the Revolution, there was a lot of violence. The guillotine, a machine used for beheadings, executed many people. The most famous execution was of King Louis XVI and his wife, Queen Marie Antoinette. Their deaths marked the end of the monarchy in France.

The French Revolution brought many fundamental changes in French society. It ended the rule of kings and queens and inaugurated a new government.

In short, the French Revolution was a memorable and pathetic affair in world history. It affected widely the lives of ordinary people in France. The French Revolution influenced the world's people in other countries to fight for their Statutory rights and freedom.