

For love, all love of other sights controls

Generated: Jan 26, 2026

“For love, all love of other sights controls,

And makes one little room an everywhere”.- Explain

In John Donne's (1572-1631) poem "The Good Morrow" (1633), the speaker talks about true love. He says that love changes how people feel and see the world. The line, “For love, all love of other sights controls, And makes one little room an everywhere,” shows how love makes life feel full and perfect. Let us understand this in simple points.

Love Brings Happiness: The speaker says that their love makes them happy. They do not need anything else to feel good. Just being together is enough for them.

Love Expands the World: Their love makes even a small room feel like a large universe. When they are together, they do not need to travel or explore. The room becomes their entire world because of their deep connection.

Love Creates Completeness: The two lovers feel complete with each other. Their love is so strong that they do not need to look for joy outside. This makes their life peaceful and perfect.

The line shows that love makes life special. It turns simple places into wonderful worlds. True love gives happiness and makes everything feel complete.