Write the theme of the poem "She Dwelt among the Untrodden Ways".

William Wordsworth's (1770-1850) poem, "She Dwelt among the Untrodden Ways" (1798), is a touching tribute to a simple, unnoticed life. The poet beautifully expresses deep emotions in this short and heartfelt poem. The theme revolves around solitude, beauty, and loss.

The Theme of Solitude: The poem shows Lucy's lonely life. She lives far away from others, near the "untrodden ways." These are places where few people go. Lucy is unknown to the world. Her quiet life reflects peace but also sadness.

The Theme of Hidden Beauty: Wordsworth compares Lucy to a violet by a mossy stone and a shining star. These images show that Lucy is beautiful, even though few people notice her. Her beauty is simple, pure, and special, like nature.

The Theme of Personal Loss: The poem ends with the poet's sorrow. Lucy dies, and very few people know about it. But for the poet, her death is a great loss. It shows how one person, even if unnoticed by others, can mean everything to someone.

This poem celebrates the quiet lives of people who live in the background. It also reminds us that their beauty and value are real, even if unnoticed by the world. Wordsworth's simple and emotional words make the poem timeless.
