Write a summary of the Poem On His Blindness

John Milton's (1608-74) "On His Blindness" (1673) is an iconic poem. In this poem, Milton talks about his feelings after losing his eyesight. He feels sad and helpless but learns to trust God. The poem teaches patience and faith in hard times.

Milton begins the poem by sharing his sadness about losing his sight. He feels that his blindness has made him useless. He can no longer use his talent for writing, which he believes is his gift from God. This makes him question how he can serve God now. He worries that he is failing in his duty to use the talent God gave him.

Milton wonders if God will be angry with him because he cannot work like before. He feels scared and confused. He thinks he is wasting his talent because of his blindness. This question shows Milton's inner struggle to understand his purpose despite his physical limitations.

In the poem, a voice called "Patience" speaks to Milton. It tells him that God does not need human work or gifts. Instead, God values those who carry their burdens with faith and trust. Patience explains that serving God is not always about action. God is happy with those who accept their problems and trust Him.

Milton realizes that he can still serve God, even if he cannot work actively. He understands that being faithful and patient is also a way to serve. This thought gives him peace and hope. Milton ends the poem by saying that even those who remain patient and wait also serve God.

In On His Blindness, Milton accepts his blindness with faith. The poem teaches that patience and trust in God are also important ways to serve Him. It gives hope to people in hard times.
