

It is a Beauteous Evening, Calm and Free Summary

Writer: William Wordsworth | Generated: Jan 26, 2026

Enjoying the Beauty of Nature and Experiencing the Presence of God on a Beautiful Evening: (First 8 Lines - Octave)

The poem begins with a description of a calm and beautiful evening. The sky is quiet, like a nun praying in silence. The sun is setting peacefully over the sea. The poet feels that the sky is watching over the ocean like a gentle guardian. Suddenly, he hears the sound of the waves crashing. To him, this sound is like the voice of God. It is powerful and eternal, like thunder that never ends. The poet is amazed by nature's beauty. He feels it is connected to something holy.

Children's Spiritual Relationship with God: (Last 6 Lines - Sestet)

In the second part, the poet talks about a young girl walking with him. This girl is his daughter. She does not seem to be deeply moved by the beautiful scene. But the poet says this does not mean she is less spiritual. Instead, he believes that children are always close to God. They do not need special moments to feel His presence. The girl's heart is pure and full of faith all the time. Even when adults forget about God, children still feel Him near. The poet admires her innocence and sees it as a gift.
