

Tintern Abbey Quotes

Writer: William Wordsworth | Generated: Jan 26, 2026

"Five years have passed; five summers with the length of five long winters!"

Explanation:

This line shows that a lot of time has passed. It talks about long summers and cold winters. It symbolizes the changes and experiences over five years.

"And now, with gleams of half-extinguished thought,
With many recognitions dim and faint"

Explanation:

In these lines from Tintern Abbey, Wordsworth talks about memories that fade. He can only remember some parts of his past and distant experiences.

"Nature never did betray
The heart that loved her;"

Explanation:

In this line from Tintern Abbey, Wordsworth expresses his deep trust in nature. He believes that nature never deceives or harms those who love and appreciate it. Instead, nature provides peace, wisdom, and comfort to those who connect with it.

"hearing oftentimes
The still sad music of humanity"

Explanation:

In this line from Tintern Abbey, Wordsworth says he often hears the quiet and sad sounds of human life. This means he feels the pain and struggles of people, but in a soft and gentle way, like music.

“A motion and a spirit, that impels

All thinking things, all objects of all thought,

And rolls through all things.”

Explanation:

In these lines from Tintern Abbey, Wordsworth talks about a powerful force that moves everything in the world. This force is like a spirit that guides all living beings and even non-living things. It connects everything and flows through all of nature.
